

Top left is the graphic of the Los Osos CSD's "60-acre" "drop dead gorgeous," "aquatic park," "advanced ponding system" treatment facility, found in the LOCSD's "Summer 2000," Bear Pride newsletter. The top right graphic, from another official LOCSD document, shows the boundary of District's completely redesigned, "5 - 7 acre" treatment facility -- the so-called "Tri-W project" -- that first emerged almost immediately after the publication of the "Summer 2000," Bear Pride newsletter. Bottom, is the boundary of District's vastly redesigned, "5 - 7 acre" second attempt at a treatment facility (in 2000), overlaid on top of the "60-acre," "advanced ponding system" found in the District's "Summer 2000," Bear Pride newsletter. [Note the cut-out in the upper right corner of the second facility, to avoid the town's library. In the light portion of the "60-acre" graphic, upper left, it reads, "Algae Drying Bed."]

In the "Summer 2000," Bear Pride newsletter, it reads, "Los Osos is very fortunate to have a large undeveloped parcel in the middle of town... This site allows for the placement of the wastewater ponds." [Note how the second project has no ponds.]
